

From: David Doukas
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/28/01 3:39pm
Subject: Remedy

To the Department of Justice.

I share the concern that Microsoft's "remedy" may be an unfair intrusion into the education market.

Apple was correct in launching its lawsuit to block it.

However, there IS a fair remedy:

Have Microsoft install "renovated Macs" -- i.e. refurbished iMacs, Airports, and iBooks in classrooms.

Yes, they can even put Microsoft Word and Internet Explorer on these computers (as long as the latter is not the "browser of choice").

This will be a "Solomon-esque" conclusion for this part of the Microsoft case, if Judge Motz accepts it.

Please feel free to circulate as necessary.

DD

David J. Doukas, M.D.
Associate Professor of Bioethics, and Family Practice/Community Medicine
University of Pennsylvania